CARLA LE ROUX

Turn strategy into capability.

Leadership & Capability Transformation | Executive Education | Organisational Change | Coaching

I help organisations translate strategic priorities into the leadership capability, programmes and organisational change needed to make them real.

THE PROBLEM

Strategy doesn't execute itself.

Organisations struggle when strategy doesn't translate into what people need to know, do and change.

A new strategy might require different leadership behaviours.

A transformation might require new capabilities.

A growth ambition might require an entirely different way of developing people.

But somewhere between the strategy document and the organisational reality, things get complicated.

That's where I come in.

I work with organisations to make sense of the challenge, identify the capabilities that matter, and design the programmes, experiences and interventions that move people from intention to action.

WHAT I DO

From strategic priority to meaningful capability.

Leadership Development

Designing leadership development that responds to the organisation you're actually in, not a generic leadership competency framework.

From emerging leaders to senior executives, I design experiences that develop the capabilities, mindsets and behaviours organisations need for what comes next.

Executive Education & Programme Design

Designing sophisticated, multi-format learning journeys for organisations that need more than a collection of workshops.

I work across the full programme lifecycle – from understanding the strategic challenge and defining the architecture, through programme design, stakeholder alignment and delivery.

Organisational Capability & Change

Connecting learning to the broader organisational system.

Where new strategy, transformation or growth requires people to work differently, I help identify the capabilities, behaviours, structures and experiences that can enable that change.

Immersive Learning

Designing experiences that take learning beyond the classroom.

International immersions, organisational visits, experiential learning and carefully curated encounters can create powerful opportunities for leaders to challenge assumptions, see systems differently and bring new possibilities back into their organisations.

Coaching

Helping leaders turn insight into action.

Coaching creates the space to think differently, navigate complexity and translate development into meaningful changes in behaviour and leadership practice.

HOW I WORK

I don't start with the programme.

I start with the problem.

Before designing a workshop, curriculum or learning journey, I want to understand:

What is the organisation trying to achieve?

What needs to be different for that to happen?

What capabilities are currently missing?

What will leaders need to think, do or lead differently?

What will make the change stick?

From there, I bring together strategy, learning design, organisational thinking and stakeholder insight to create an intervention that is fit for purpose.

Because sometimes the answer is a leadership programme.

Sometimes it's an executive learning journey.

Sometimes it's coaching.

And sometimes it's realising that a training programme isn't the answer at all.

EXPERIENCE

A decade designing for complexity.

I've worked across executive education, leadership development, digital learning, international programmes and organisational capability – across Africa, Europe and the UK.

My experience includes:

- Leading multi-year, multi-cohort executive programmes
- Designing leadership development initiatives across 13 African countries
- Working with universities, corporates and development organisations
- Managing complex, multi-stakeholder programme environments
- Designing international leadership immersions
- Translating client needs into theoretically sound, commercially viable programmes
- Developing winning proposals and pitches
- Working alongside senior executives, faculty, partners and delivery teams
- Coaching leaders through development and change

I've worked with organisations including UCT Graduate School of Business, African Management Institute, AGRA, Cambridge Judge Business School, FutureLearn, University of Bristol, SALGA and other corporate and development partners.

THE WAY I THINK

Structure for ambiguity.

The most interesting organisational problems rarely arrive as neat briefs.

They're messy.

There are competing stakeholders.

Unclear requirements.

Political dynamics.

Strategic shifts.

Different definitions of success.

My strength is working inside that ambiguity without becoming overwhelmed by it – creating the structure, questions and systems needed to move from complexity to clarity.

I bring a combination of:

Strategic thinking

Understanding the organisational challenge behind the brief.

Learning expertise

Knowing how adults actually develop capability.

Systems thinking

Seeing learning as part of a wider organisational system.

Programme leadership

Turning ideas into complex, deliverable programmes.

Coaching

Creating the conditions for people to think, reflect and change.

WHO I WORK WITH

For organisations that are asking:

How do we build the leadership capability our strategy requires?

How do we design a leadership programme that actually changes something?

How do we turn a strategic priority into a meaningful development experience?

How do we equip leaders to navigate complexity and change?

How do we bring together learning, leadership and organisational transformation?

If you're asking questions like these, let's talk.

SELECTED WORK

A few examples of what this looks like.

Centre for African Leaders in Agriculture

Leadership development | Africa | Multi-country

Designed and led the development of a major leadership initiative with AGRA, expanding its reach from 8 to 13 African countries and introducing Executive and Junior Leadership Development tiers.

Executive Education & International Immersions

Programme architecture | Leadership development | Global

Designed and led multi-year, multi-cohort executive education programmes incorporating international immersion experiences, complex stakeholder ecosystems and multiple delivery partners.

Digital & Blended Learning

Learning innovation | Digital transformation

Designed digital and blended learning experiences for leading educational institutions and organisations, including Cambridge Judge Business School, FutureLearn and the University of Bristol.

ABOUT

Hi, I'm Carla.

I'm a learning and capability strategist, programme designer and coach who has spent the past decade helping organisations turn complex ideas into meaningful development experiences.

My career has moved across learning design, executive education, business development, international programme management and coaching.

That combination matters.

It means I don't see learning as an isolated function.

I see it as a way of helping organisations build the capability to do what they need to do next.

I'm particularly interested in the messy middle – the point where strategy meets people, where capability meets culture, and where an organisation needs to move from knowing what it wants to achieve to actually being able to achieve it.

LET'S TALK

Have a complex capability challenge?

You don't need to have the brief perfectly worked out before you get in touch.

Bring the problem.

We can figure out what kind of intervention – if any – will actually help.
